ALL RIGHT.

It is encouraging to note from the Virginia Citizen, owned and edited by Commodore McDonald Lee, chairman of the State Fisheries Commission, appointed to investigate the bivalve in those waters, will fully vindicate the Potomac river oyster. Some months ago, it will be recalled a member of the chemistry bureau of the agricultural department at Washington, made a public deliverance, based upon what is charged to have been only a superficial examination, in which the healthfulness of the Potomac river beds was seriously questioned. Desirous, on the one hand, of protecting the public health, should the report be correct, and, on the other hand, of preventing damage to a large industry, should it be incorrect, Governor Mann proposed a thorough investigation by experts representing Virginia, Maryland and the United States government. The proposal was accepted by Governor Goldsborough, of Maryland, and a commission was appointed whose composition consisted of one bacteriologist and one chemist from each State and two officials of the United States department of agriculture.

Three times, says the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, this commission has gone over the Potomac river beds, a great deal of laboratory work has been done and many samples examined. While the text of its report is not yet available, and will not be until it shall have been submitted to the governors of Maryland and Virginia, the findings, it is said, have been garaged upon and constitute a complete vindication of the oyster beds in question. The report, it is understood, will among other things recommend a line across the river above which no oysters may be taken, and that no oysters be planted near the mouth of certain creeks.

This vindication, proceeding from the source which it does, ought, when officially given out, to put an end to the agitation which has already done a great deal of uncalculated damage to the oyster industry on the Potomac. That the public health is entitled to and should receive first consideration goes without saying. But no less true is it that food faddists should be absolutely certain that they know whereof they speak before giving publicity to charges calculated to destroy the livelihood of thousands of people.

CONFEDERATE VETERAN
RENOUNCES WORK.

One of the Richmond papers of yesterday contained the following:
Dick Ragland, of Halifax county, a Confederate veteran, was in Richmond Saturday, and, as usual upon his visits to this city he went to the office of the State Auditor of Public Accounts to pay his respects to Auditor Moore and incidentally to emphasize his present address on the eye of mailing out the pension checks, one of which will be mailed to him.

It is alleged that Dick made a solemn vow when the Confederate flag was furled at Appomattox that he would never do a day's work from that historical epoch and the shores of time. It is also alleged that Dick has faithfully kept that vow, and that his nomadic wanderings include every section of this country from the Atlantic to the Pacific, never losing an opportunity to unfold his tale of woe of the privations he endured through four years of the great civil war, in which he alleges his bosom was barred to the enemy's steel and leaden hail for a principle he not only believed to be right, but was right.

It is said that Dick narrowly escaped being ground to death beneath the wheels of a train at Danville while riding the "blind baggage," but when the train was stopped for the purpose of gathering up the mangled remains of the ex-Confederate crawled from beneath the train unharmed, having hugged the roadbed so closely that he escaped the horrible death to which he had been exposed.

On several occasions during the past two score or more of years men have appeared with hair and locks as elongated as those of Rip Van Winkle, who had made vows not to submit to capillary abridgement, until the Southern Confederacy should be recognized. Such individuals were at first regarded with sympathy, but more interesting and pathetic pictures absorb the attention of another generation, and the man who refuses to work because he was a Confederate soldier is not calculated to appeal to many in this busy age.

Early in 1895, when the survivors of Colonel Mosby's command held their reunion in Potomac lodge rooms in Alexandria the Gazette in describing the scenes incident to that interesting gathering, called attention to the fact that during the civil war members of this gallant band were pictured by northern writers and illustrators on a par with the Forty Thieves. They were represented as being attired in Dick Turpin apparel, playing cards around a camp fire, with a decapitated dead federal soldier lying close by with a bayonet stuck deep into his breast. The gathering in Alexandria, in contrast to such libels, was composed of thrifty farmers, merchants and preachers, men who stood in the front ranks of the nation who had the industry and talents for successful business pursuits.

They had not renounced honest labor when compelled to lay down their arms in defense of their principles, and there is no good reason why any other man who followed the fortunes of the Lost Cause should become an itinerant and a straggler in the march of life.

POLICEMAN PUT IN CELL.

New York Patrolman Accused of Being a Highwayman.

New York, Sept. 2.—Accused of being a highwayman, Patrolman Jas. F. Brady, of the East 51st street station, was stripped of his shield, club and gun, and put in a cell in his own station yesterday afternoon.

The arrest was made under dramatic circumstances by James F. Dillon, fourth deputy police commissioner, who for many hours had investigated an amazing charge made against Brady by John Robinson, a bartender, of 49 Prospect Place.

Robinson said Brady told him there was trouble in a hallway at 250 East 43rd street, between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning and sought his help. Robinson went into the hallway and says Brady attacked and robbed him there.

The Deputy Commissioner learned Brady had an excellent record and is known as a man who never drinks to excess. Policeman Brady has been with the department only fourteen months. He is 35 years old.

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 2.—Miss Winnie Wallace and Miss Flora Smith, the two young militant suffragettes, who assaulted Premier Asquith on the golf links at Elgin last Thursday, attacked the Premier in a church at Elgin during the services Sunday, according to word received here yesterday afternoon.

The two girls were out on bail, having been held for trial for attacking Mr. Asquith last week. During services the girls entered the church as though they were belated worshippers, and then, with shouts of rage, hurled themselves upon the Premier.
